Kevin's Story

"In my late teens, I started hanging out at nightclubs like the legendary Studio 54 in New York City. For my first few years as a club kid/party boy, I drank a lot, but I did not use drugs. My nocturnal activities parlayed their way into a successful career as an entertainment journalist, but by the time I was in my early twenties, I had become equally successful at something else—snorting and smoking cocaine." Adrian's Story

"I grew up youngest of three kids, so I was spoiled a lot by my parents and my sister and brother. My family members are very successful individuals, so I always had amazing role models for guidance. In grade school, I was the class clown, and was a pretty mischievous kid. It was fairly normal behavior for a kid my age, until it all changed for me in junior high school when I was introduced to drugs for the first time." Read Adrian's Full Story

Lena's Story

"PROMETA was the best thing I could have ever done. I've had to change all of my friends entirely, and I stay away from environments and people who could put me in potentially harmful environments and tempting situations." Read Lena's Full Story

Brad's Story

"At 38 years old, I didn't choose crystal methamphetamine. Crystal meth chose me. Ten years ago I discovered crystal meth by accident—it had been on the menu of recreational drugs for the night. One thing was for sure—there was nothing recreational about meth." Read Brad's Story
